GENTLENIER,—Deeply grateful as I feel for the honor done me in the nomination, by my fellow Whigs of the Xilith Ward, as a Candidate for the Assembly, and remembering as I do, with grateful thanks, the past evidences of their confidence and esteem in their previous selection of myself as their representative, it is with painful regret that I am compeled by the urgent demand of my present business circumstances, to decline respectfully the nomination so unanimor aly and generously tendered to me.

Believelpine, Gentlemen, that nothing but imperative considerations growing out of my private duties, compel me to decline the honor deeligned for me; and permit me to assure my Whitz friends of the ardent sympathy for the good cause in which they are engaged, and of my most sincere wides for the encesse of the principles to which we are in common devotedly attached. With respect and esteem, EF Steam Trini Trip.—On Friday, the let inst, the writer, in company with several gentlemen, enjoyed a pleasant trip on the small experimental strainer ROTALLY. Her name designates her principle of propulsion. The steam acts upon a compact engine, about the size, in dircumference, of the head of a harrel, and about 12 inches thick. The power is applied directly to the shaft, which, with the paddic wheels and a rearing for pumping water and blowing the fire, comprise the equipment. A good watch is a very correct simile of the engine in its construction and movements, for no piece of machinery can run more uniform, time and beautiful, nor be more easily made cheddent to every charge desired—of poing ahead, stopping or backing. Like the duttings on the telegraph paper, each change may be produced by the pilot with the thought that suggests it, and by a touch light as a finger on a plano. This improvement must be nost valuable to ferry boats, although very valuable on any steam craft. Nor is this principle confined to water communication—the engine would prove most successful to a begen of the New Year are given on a state on a transport.

ment must be not various to the principle confined to water communication—the engine would prove most successful to a locemotive. No jets are given on starting, and there would be a smoothness in its workings unsurpassed.

But to return to our trip. We jet Atlantic Dock, Broaklyn, at 169 o'clock A. M. and arrived at Sandy Point Light-House, in the Sound, in 29 hours. I see we leaded and particle of the Light House.

At 4; P. M. we weighed anchor and were homeward bound. We started with 40 hounds steam and a poor fire, which was soon kindled up by the blower, and the steam graduelly increased to 60, and upward. We ran back, with a strong tide against us, in 2 hours and 43 minutes, helm all well satisfied with the trip and the performance of the heautiful little Rotary. The large steamer (Bay State) that crossed us just below Hurl Gate, apparently for the purpose of seeing the effect of her wake upon us must have been delighted to see her so through it like a fish. The Gaptain of the steamer Ursh, and the Engineer of the British steamer Cherokee, were among the number of guests, and expressed admiration of the performance and their confidence of the success of the invention of Mr. Barrows.

Atlantic Dock, Tuesday, Oct. 5, 1852.

Dear Six. Allow me to congranulate you on the discovery and perfection of the Rotary Engine. Last Friday, when leaving the Atlantic Dock on an excursion that I had the honor of an invitation on, I noticed the boiler was pumped full of water, and with admiration i witcessed the excess of water pass through the cylinder and discharge out through the cylinder, gives the Rotary a decided advantage over all other engines that I have any knowledge of. Had the like quantity of water been forced inte any other kind of cylinder of the same size, it would have caused hydraulic pressure sufficient to burst, or strain it in some shape or form, whereas theirs was no danger and apparently no insonventence attending the Rotary cylinder. Furthermore, if any one deubts the power of the Rotary Engine, I can assure them that we came, whilst on the said excursion from Sands Point, on the Sound, to the Novelty Works, in New-York, a distance of 20 miles, against a strong tide, running from 3 to 5 knots an hour, in 2 hours and 43 minutes, which is as much as can be expected from so small a boal, with any kind of an engine. I have no doubt, from the economy of fuel that is natural to the Rotary Engine, combined with Pirssons's patent condenser, the saving of facel would be so great as to atomish the scientific."

I am inclined to believe that a great many explosions on board of steamboats occur from over-cautionares of engineers, with regard to working water through the cylinder and endangering the same. In avoiding the extreme of having too much water in the believe pre-tunkely when the water swells from fermentation, which enter the look of the Chanel, ammentally speaking.

With due respect, I remain

Captain of Steemship Utali.

Atlantic Dock, Brookly S. Tuesday, Oct 5, 1852.

Dear Sir. As I have witnessed, with sail faction, the operation of your Improved Robert Engine, which propelled your little steamboat Roberty on Friday, the 1st inst. on an excursion from this City to Sand's Point, on the Sound, I have every confidence in recommending, to the notice of the public, and particularly to those who doubt the practicability of a Rotary Engine, as we had a run of over miles, which we accompassed in about 5 hours. During that time I had every opportunity to examine it carefully. With an experience of 20 years on the Cityde, in the Oid Country, among engineers of almost every kind, and for the last loyests of my leasure time I have been alming at the same thing, believing it to be practicable. I am aware that it is the opinion of our best engineers, in the New and Old World, that the Rotary can never take the place of our reciprocating Engines, but it can only be an opinion, and although the immortal Watts did not succeed in his endeavors to complete successfully his Rotary Engine, he must, at one time of his life, believed it to be practicable. I feel confident that if any man who has even a cummon knowledge of mechanics, will ay aside his prejudices and examine thoroughly the Engine in operation, and also the little model engine which was opened for our examination, (which had been in operation, and the beautral manner in which it is packed, that they will see good and substantial reasons for laying aside their old prejudices, and put their reasons for laying aside their old prejudices, and put their reasons for laying aside their old prejudices, and put their present pressive of England rot give to retract that sentiment, in his speech, when steam navigation was first advocated to cross the Atlantic, vie "That he would eat the other of the first steamer that crossed the Atlantic.
